The question of identity has troubled humanity for centuries. But now in a technological age of communication, economic crisis and rapid change, we are confronted more than ever with the question: who are we?

It is What it Was is an exhibition featuring original work from an international group of emerging photojournalists who respond to this question through a range of approaches from the classically journalistic to the thought-provokingly conceptual. Spanning continents, ethnicities and personal boundaries, this exhibition showcases the height of photographic practice combines with the probing insight of quality documentary.
